

3 Ways to Celebrate Birthdays During Quarantine

Birthdays are special. They're a chance to reflect on the last year, plan for the next and, of course, get your favorite friends and family together. This year, birthday bashes may look different than you pictured, but there's no reason to skip out on the festivities altogether.

If your friend or family member has a birthday around the corner, there's still dozens of ways to make them feel loved and celebrated on their special day.

Here's a few of our favorites.

1. Send letters to your loved ones.

Snail mail is back in style. Organize your loved ones' friends and family members to all send cards to arrive on their big day. Not only will your pal be pleasantly surprised by the time the mailman arrives, they'll have cards and letters of love and celebration to look back on for years.

2. Host a virtual game night.

Soak up some much-needed virtual facetime (and friendly competition) with the birthday gal or guy during a fun game night. Apps like Houseparty are built with group-friendly games or you can purchase games on sites like JackBox, Days of Wonder and Steam to play on Zoom or Google Hangout.

3. Surprise your loved one with their favorite takeout meal.

Pop your loved one's address into Postmates or Grubhub and surprise them with birthday dinner at their door. Apps like Drizly can deliver champagne, wine and liquor too for a virtual drink on you. Cheers to that!

How are you keeping birthdays special during quarantine?